ONCOLOGY

The National Cancer Institute (NCI) Office of Physical Sciences-Oncology is pleased to host a symposium, New Frontiers in Physical Sciences and Oncology, to share research at the intersection of the physical and life sciences and how this convergence is impacting cancer research. Topics to be presented include information transfer in time and space, physics of cancer, advancing cancer technologies, evolutionary dynamics in cancer, and links to clinical perspectives. Speakers from within and outside the NCI Physical Sciences-Oncology Center (PS-OC) Program will highlight their work at this new and exciting frontier of cancer research.

Date: Monday, December 10, 2012

Time: 8:30 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. ET

Location: Masur Auditorium, Building 10 Clinical Center, NIH Campus, Bethesda, MD
